pecial Correspondence of THE REPUBLICAN. FERNANDINA, June 14.-Florida is as CIATION BANK, No. 172 New York avenue (Ivans place, owns a very handsome residence here, J. Eppinger, New York; A. H. Rickers, Baltimore; which is surrounded by beautifully improved grounds. A very fine specimen of the American agave, commonly called the century plant, is preparing to bloom in these grounds. These plants flower but once in their lifetime, and then die down after they attain maturity (in the climate of Florida a period of ten to twenty years). They send up a straight, upright stem twenty or more feet in height, and at the base often eight to ten inches in diameter, along which are small suppressed lanceolated branches, with a terminal panicle, often bearing from three to four thousand flowers. The Agare americand was carried from America to Europe in 1561, and in European hot-houses they were often nearly one hundred years old before reaching maturity, from which circumstance they obtained the name of century plant. They are easily propagated by suckers, and are used for fences in Italian Switzerland, and have become naturalized in most of the southern countries of Europe. The leaves, on being macerated with water, vield a coarse fibre, which in Mexico is manufactured into ropes, hammocks, and such articles. The nulque used in Mexico as an intoxicating beverage is extracted from the species known as Agare mexicana. THE AGAVE AMERICANA is a very beautiful and ornamental plant, and has now become so general in Florida that its blooming has become an annual occurrence in the older portions of the State. The flower is magnificent in size, although neither very beautiful nor fragrant. Advices from Tallahassee, Archer, and and other portions of the State speak of the drouth. Vegetation is becoming dry and parched. The yield of Irish potatoes will not be so large as was expected. Yet even this condition of affairs has its "sunny side;" for it is said there is nothing so good for the cotton crop as a Mr. dry May, Much use is made of the ton, D. C. cotton-seed meal. A ton of meal contains thirtyeight pounds of potash and fifty-six pounds of after the trees more closely than is done at presphosphoric acid, with seventy-eight pounds of ent. Some need trimming; many need new boxes nitrogen. It is thus rich enough in these elements | for protection. to be useful as a fertilizer, for which purpose it is food, it cannot well be given to animals except in very small quantities. Horses thrive on it if given but two pounds daily with cornmeal. Two pounds of it are equal to ten pounds of oats. If used as a food too abundantly, however, it becomes very injurious. This is doubtless on account of its highly nitrogenous nature.

ONE OF THE ILL EFFECTS of too much use for food of this meal is an inflammatory condition of the system, and horses suffer from irritation of the skin and sore mouth. It is as though a man was fed on extract of beef, rich pastry, and such food only. When used judiciously and with a knowledge of its character and value it is the cheanest (at its present price, $3) a kind, Humphrey's Specifics, Extract Witch

It is claimed by some that except during the rainy season portions of these lands are amply drained by natural outlets; the rain, however, when it is excessive, chokes up these outlets and the lands are covered with water, not because they are low, but because there are no channels s ch an immense area. Whether the land is rich enough to make cane culture profitable is doubtful; but it is asserted that on soil of the same character Captain Burnham, of the Cape Canaveral light-house, has gathered Subscribers' tickets will be tr'ten at any of these large crops for fifteen years, and this with a hoe as stations in payment of messages. The following his only implement of cultivation. The past season he is said to have made eight hundred gallous to the acre of No. 1 syrup on land that had been growing the same crop for twelve years, with only one replanting. Certainly this can be done in some portions of the land to be reclaimed. Much of it is certainly unfit for corn, cane, or any of their kindred; but for the pineapple, however, it is exactly fit, and it is predicted that these beautiful lands will become as productive as any other in the State and the pincapple take a more prominent place AMONG THE EXPORTS OF FLORIDA at no distant day. Even now plants are eagerly sought for, and bring good prices, and the annual increase in acreage is limited by the inability to obtain sets. Most of these are obtained from Key Largo in small boats, by dangerous navigation through the Jupiter Inlet and down the coast. On this block of coquiney a gentleman has thirty acres in bananas and pineapples, and he estimates $500 per acre as only an average yield. Truly one may expect other than orange "booms" in Florida, and yet many who go to the State with no such idea very soon become interested in orange culture. In this connection the views of a gentleman from Green Cove Springs are interesting. He says: "Every one who comes to live in Florida, whatever his intentions may be, soon becomes infected and plants a grove. It is amusing to note the growth of this orange mania upon the new-comer. He is here for health perhaps, or to avoid the cold winters of the North; has thought to confine himself to his profession, or possibly to the mercantile business; if he is a farmer, vegetable raising in connection with the old staples of the country will engage his attention, but he doesn't much believe in oranges or lemons; thinks the demand for these fruits does not amount to enough to warrant any man in taking the trouble to raise a grove. Well enough to have plenty for family use, but to try to make a fortune out of oranges-nonsense: that is all folly.' But he begins to hear oranges talked morning, noon, and night; he sees boxes of them shipped by the thousand; he sees the owner of a few hundred bearing trees getting a yearly ncome of thousands of dollars from their fruit; he suddenly placed in easy circumstances. ALL THESE THINGS STAGGER his philosophy; he begins to study the laws of demand and supply in their application to orange and leinon; he learns why the Florida orange is the best in the world and commands the highest price; he becomes convinced that the market can | Manly Proposition of the National Rifles never be oversupplied with Florida oranges, and he can withstand the temptation no longer, but falls into rank and goes to setting out his his place as one of the "orange nabobs" of the adopted: Their value consists in the very fact that it takes | cup in favor of the National Rifle Team, that this years of labor to raise them.
